

BellevueLocalTable.com serves up online guide to restaurants, happy hours, “foodie” news

BELLEVUE, Wash. (Oct. 29, 2009) – Getting the dish on downtown dining just got easier thanks to BellevueLocalTable.com, a new site served up by the Bellevue Downtown Association (BDA).

BellevueLocalTable.com, or “BLT” for short, offers a complete guide to downtown restaurants sorted by cuisine, paired with a happy hour guide, a foodies section and an updated list of special events and promotions. The BLT blog (BellevueLocalTable.com/blog), authored by BDA staff members and featured contributors, supplies fresh insight on local restaurant news, recipes, chef profiles, and food-related trends.

“The quality and variety of our dining options keeps getting better,” said Leslie Lloyd, BDA president and a frequent BLT blog contributor. “Downtown Bellevue is a top dining destination, and BLT is simply a one-stop resource for where to go and what to try.”

In 2003, the Bellevue Downtown Association introduced a comprehensive Downtown Bellevue restaurant guide as part of Bellevue Downtown magazine. Diners now have over 150 options, ranging from quick service delis to award-winning chef-owned eateries.

“Thriving restaurants are such a vital part of any vibrant city,” Lloyd added. “BLT is all about fostering more conversation around the table about our restaurants, the people behind them, and their role in making the place.”
